What do I want to learn or understand better?

- A) I have taken a few different programming courses in programming, particularly in Java and SQL. However, I have yet to partake in any sort of actual bigger development project, and have not worked with the scrum process.
- B) I would like to gain knowledge and experience regarding the whole project process, so that I'm able to confidently utilize the scrum process in future settings.
- C) Make sure that we as a group and me in particular are properly working by the principles of scrum, so that I may properly learn how to utilize the scrum process to its fullest potential.

How can I help someone else, or the entire team, to learn something new?

- A) Most students in our team are students of Information technology. Compared to the two of us who study Industrial Engineering and Management, they may not have as much experience regarding the business side of projects and product development.
- B) To make sure that all students in our team are on the same level of understanding when it comes to management of relations with our product owner and other business partners.
- C) Continuously make sure that everyone is on the same page when it comes to the business side of developing the product.

What is my contribution towards the team's use of Scrum?

- A) As of yet, I cannot say that I completely understand the process of scrum and how you work with it.
- B) Implementing scrum to the best of my abilities.
- C) Participate in exercises and lectures about scrum, and to read up more about it if necessary.

What is my contribution towards the team's deliveries?

- A) One thing I actively try to do is to aim towards the group making concrete decisions as to how to move forward, so that the group does not get stuck too much in ideas or discussions.
- B) I want everyone to enjoy working with our project, so that they are motivated in finding solutions and putting in the hours needed.

C) Foster a good environment where we are friendly and cooperative by being friendly and cooperative myself, which will hopefully spread and lead to increased motivation.
