Structure:

A: The current situation or "what is".
B: What you want the situation to be or "what might or should be".
A→B: A plan for getting from where you are to where you want to be or "feedback designed to reduce the gap.

- What do I want to learn or understand better?

  A: I feel like I have made progress in understanding how scrum works.

  B: I would like to be able to be even more efficient and have an even better plan, to get more work done in one sprint.

  A→B: I will keep up to date with the notes taken during the meetings.

- How can I help someone else, or the entire team, to learn something new?

  A: I feel I can often help a team member when we get stuck, by pausing, and doing some research on what is going wrong.

  B: I would like to be able to catch these things before they are show up as errors.

  A→B: I will do this by gaining experience in web development, and learning from the people in the group that have knowledge in this area already.

- What is my contribution towards the I team's use of Scrum?

  A: I think that I help with producing constructing user stories that have clear acceptance criteria's, without unnecessary "gold plating".

  B: I would like to be able to formulate them in a better way. With the template "as an X I want Y since Z", you often get a very general Z for example.

  A→B: I will listen to the product owner and hear his reasoning.

- What is my contribution towards the team's deliveries?

  A: My contribution is that I am confident in my ability to learn new things quickly, so I can take on user stories that seem difficult.

  B: I want to know the new things of course, and not have to learn at every turn.

A→B: I need more experience, which (again) means to code more, maybe watch videos and also talking to people with experience.
