What do I want to learn or understand better?

A) After the exercise on monday, I now feel that I have a much better idea of the concept of scrum, with the concepts of sprints and product owners and such.

B) I would still like to become more experienced in the utilization of scrum, so that I may use it effectively in the future.

C) The goal and the means to get there remain the same as last week; make sure that we as a group and me in particular are properly working by the principles of scrum, so that I may properly learn how to utilize the scrum process to its fullest potential. However, I now know more about what this actually entails, and will make sure to point out when we are not working by the scrum process.

How can I help someone else, or the entire team, to learn something new?

A) Currently, we haven't really started our development process very much, except for establishing a product concept and a product owner.

B) Like previous week, to make sure that all students in our team are on the same level of understanding when it comes to management of relations with our product owner and other business partners.

C) By making sure that everyone is on the same page when it comes to the business side of developing the product, and by properly explaining and introducing the others to useful concepts and terms if they are unfamiliar with them.

What is my contribution towards the team's use of Scrum?

A) I have been using Trello for over a year on a personal level, which I think will come in handy since we have decided to use Trello for the purposes of managing our project.

B) I want everyone to feel confident with scrum and that they feel motivated to work by the methods of scrum, and not drift off into some other way of doing things.

C) The means are here similar to the first question, in that I in every step of the way shall make sure that we follow the principles of scrum and raise my voice whenever we don't.

What is my contribution towards the team's deliveries?

A) Since I've studied more business-related courses compared to most of the others in the group, it was appropriate that I was on the part of the team assigned to do the business model canvas, as well as providing background and motivation as to why our product is needed.

B) As well as wanting to foster a motivating environment, I want the group to feel safe in entrusting me with important tasks, and for them to trust that I will finish them on time and with precision.

C) Make sure to prioritize group work before individual work, so that we feel like we are working together and not separately. This is especially important in times where we do not get to meet up in person as much.
